DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-21 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Bezos et al. (US 6,029,141) ("Bezos") in view of Walker et al. (US 6,041,308) ("Walker") and further in view of Official Notice.

Bezos teaches a method of managing a multi-vendor online sales channel, the method comprising: receiving from each of a plurality of sellers information describing one or more items for sale (col. 2, lines 3-5; col. 7, lines 21-30); presenting the items for sale to potential buyers through a unified storefront on an online marketplace, and presenting a consistent interface to the potential buyers (col. 2, lines 48-65; col. 13, lines 10-15); receiving through the unified storefront an order from a buyer to purchase an item (col. 13, lines 16-22). Bezos does not teach masking identities of the plurality of sellers. However, Walker teaches a system and method for conditional purchase offers that keeps the seller's identities anonymous (col. 6, lines 36-42). Therefore it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art, at the time the invention was made, to incorporate the teachings of Walker into the invention of Bezos. One of ordinary skill in the art would have been motivated to do so in order to enable sellers to participate in the CPO process without fear of undercutting their published price structures and losing their regular customer base, as taught by Walker. The cited prior art does not teach taking flash title to the purchased item prior to fulfilling the buyer's order. However, the Applicants' specification discloses that the term "flash title" refers to "...a legal title that the connection provider assumes for an item from the point of sale to the time the order is fulfilled (e.g., when the item is delivered to the buyer)." (See specification paragraph [0043]). Therefore, Official Notice is taken that it is old and well known in the art for a third party (e.g. connection provider or delivery agent) to assume legal title for a product from the point of sale to the time the order is fulfilled (i.e. delivered). Therefore it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art, at the time the invention was made, to incorporate this feature into the cited prior art. One of ordinary skill in the art would have been motivated to do so in order to transfer legal ownership to the delivery agent while the product was in transit.
